- Nutritional yeast flakes x 6 teaspoons
- Parsley x 1 cup or a good handful (chopped)
- Spring onions 1 bunch
- Stock or water x 1 - 2 cups
- Coconut Yoghurt x 6 tablespoons for garnishing
- Pepper to taste

Method

1. Peel and dice the pumpkin into approximately 3cm cubes
  2. Place pumpkin onto a baking tray and bake for around 20-30 minutes on moderate heat oven 165c/329f
  3. While the pumpkin is baking, roughly chop the garlic, ginger and fresh turmeric set aside
  4. Slice up the spring onions and parsley and set aside, you need to reserve some aside for garnish
  5. Once the pumpkin is done, set aside until needed
  6. With a 7 litre pot over low heat, add olive oil and saute the garlic being careful not to brown
  7. Add the ginger and turmeric pieces (if using fresh turmeric, if not add in the next step)
  8. Add the cumin and turmeric powder, stir until fragrant
  9. * Note Stir continually making sure the pot contents don't burn because it will make the soup very bitter and will need to start again
  10. Add the baked pumpkin
  11. Pour in the vegetable stock and cook until simmering and cook for further 10 minutes
  12. Add the marmite and nutritional yeast flakes and stir
  13. Take the pot off the heat and puree the content with a stick blender
  14. You may need to add a bit more liquid to get your desired consistency
  15. Add in most of the chives but reserve some aside for garnish
  16. Add in the parsley, but you can use some for garnish
- When serving the soup, dollop a tablespoon of the coconut yoghurt and garnish with chives, parsley and sprinkle with pepper
